People who invent things are called inventors. Ever since the beginning of time inventors have invented many useful things. We can't imagine living without electricity, automobiles, telephones, airplanes, computers etc.

In 1876 the Scottish inventor Alexander Graham Bell (1847-1927) invented the telephone. Bell has been described as one of the most influential figures in human history.

In 1879 the American inventor Thomas Edison (1847-1931) developed an early type of the light bulb. Edison also invented an early type of the sound recorder (a phonograph), the motion picture camera and lots of other things. Edison is considered one of the most prolific* inventors in history.
